Tackling the weeds

We put a photo of the cemetery on Google Maps this year and were notified in May that 1000 people had looked at it. No extra person appears to have visited, however, despite the finger tapping addiction of phone owners.

The geo-textile used as a weed suppressor has finally been defeated by our local weeds and we may have to renew it. It has lasted five years and suppressed the weeds for four monsoons. The weeds have grown in the sand on top of the geo-textile presumably, but can't be removed without ripping the material if the roots have forced their way down.
