"Invoking Justice," a social documentary about Muslim women's fight for social justice in Tamil Nadu was screened at Sukhdham on Saturday, 19th January in front of an invited audience. The film has been sensational at international screenings as it shows the first ever divorce given by an all women's Jamaat to be accepted by the husband.

The director Deepa Dhanraj was in Kota filming her next documentary about the lives of the elderly in India. It will include an interview with an elderly woman weaver from Kaithoon near Kota, who was happy with her lot and content to be contributing economically to the family income. We look forward to seeing this documentary in the future.
